NOMINATION AS DIRECTOR OF CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE OF ADM. STANSFIELD TURNER

The Select Committee on Intelligence, to which was referred the nomination of Admiral Stansfield Turner, of Illinois, to be the Director of Central Intelligence, having considered the same, reports favorably therein and recommends that the nomination be confirmed.

BACKGROUND OF COMMITTEE CONSIDERATION

Admiral Turner's nomination was sent to the Senate by President Carter on February 10, 1977 and referred to the Select Committee on Intelligence on the same day. On February 10 public announcement was made and printed in the Congressional Record that a hearing would be held on February 22 and that all those who wished to testify were so invited. Hearings were held on February 22. All who indicated a desire to appear were notified and testimony and statements were received from all witnesses present.

On Wednesday, February 23, 1977, the committee met in public session. By unanimous vote (and by a majority of those present and forming a quorum of the Committee) it was agreed to report favorably to the Senate the nomination of Adm. Stansfield Turner.

Issues Considered by the Committee

In an opening statement, the chairman of the committee, Senator Daniel K. Inouye, outlined the committee's expectations for a new Director of Central Intelligence and stated:

The national intelligence system requires a leader that will be able to direct the activities of the many highly complex organizations in the national intelligence community * * * The position of the Director of Central Intelligence requires the ability to manage, to set priorities and to allocate resources * * * The most important duty of the Director * * * is to provide the President and the national leadership, in both the executive and legislative branches with the best information and analysis of that information available to the United States Government. Independence of mind, mature judgment and an analytic bent are qualities that must be possessed by the Director * * *

It will be the task of the Director of Central Intelligence to assure that our national intelligence system * * * will work under the Constitution and the law. A close working relationship between the Director * * * and the committee is vitally important * * * if the public is to have the confidence that necessarily secret activities of the United States are being conducted in conformity with the Constitution and the law and with the purpose of strengthening our free democratic society.

Admiral Turner was introduced by Senator Adlai Stevenson. Later in the day Senator Charles Percy of Illinois testified before the committee in favor of Admiral Turner's confirmation.

In morning and afternoon sessions the members of the committee questioned Admiral Turner on numerous issues, among them, possible conflicts created by serving both as an active military officer and as Director of Central Intelligence; the relationship between the DCI and the oversight responsibilities of the Senate Select Committee as set forth in Senate Resolution 400; the authority for and the restraints upon clandestine activities; the overall quality of U.S. intelligence production; the relationship between the DCI and the President; the necessity to protect the civil liberates of American citizens; and the need for statutory charters for the intelligence agencies.

In response to committee questioning, Admiral Turner agreed not to seek the offices of Chief of Naval Operations or Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff when these become vacant in 1978, and he recognized the committee's concern for continuity of leadership in the national intelligence community. He indicated his willingness to provide the select committee with full and timely information on CIA covert action and clandestine collection programs. He promised to work with this committee in considering new statutory charters for the intelligence agencies, and he evidenced real concern, both in his opening statement and in his answers to questions, for the need to insure that intelligence activities do not adversely affect the constitutional or legal rights of American citizens.

Admiral Turner assured the committee on the basis of discussions with President Carter that he will have regular access to the President and that he will provide the President with detailed and objective information. He recognized the need for any Director of Central Intelligence to be ready to resign rather than to implement directives which he believes are unconstitutional, illegal, or in conflict with his moral standards. Finally, Admiral Turner expressed his determination to produce national intelligence which is objective, which acknowledges diverse viewpoints within the intelligence community, and which elucidates the rationales for those contrasting views. Admiral Turner will respond in writing to a series of other questions submitted by the committee. His responses will be published in the committee's hearing record.

Following Admiral Turner's testimony, the committee heard statements from Mr. David Cohen, president of Common Cause; Mr. John Marks, project director of the Center for National Security Studies; and Mr. Richard Cohen of the U.S. Labor Party.

In view of Admiral Turner's demonstrated leadership abilities, his awareness of the need to strengthen the effectiveness of the national intelligence community, and to improve the quality of the information and analysis it produces for the President and the Congress, his pledge to work closely with the Select Committee in all matters mandated by Senate Resolution 400, and his strongly expressed commitment to conduct this Nation's intelligence activities under the Constitution and the law, the committee recommended that Admiral Turner be confirmed by the Senate.

APPENDIX

The Select Committee on Intelligence submits a two-part Questionnaire and Financial Disclosure Statement to each nominee for the positions of Director of Central Intelligence and the present statutory position of Deputy Director. Part I appears below and consists of responses to questions relating to personal background, qualifications, and general financial arrangements.

Part II consists of specific financial data, which the committee requested in part because the Central Intelligence Agency Act of 1949 allows the Director of Central Intelligence exceptional discretion over the disbursement of funds. Part II is available for public inspection at the offices of the Select Committee on Intelligence.

Admiral Turner has informed the select committee that he will place his investments in a blind trust under the guidelines established by the administration for Level II and Cabinet appointments. He indicated he will disclose the details of his trust arrangements in the near future.

 $\underbrace{\text{Qualifications}}_{\text{the position to}}:$ State fully your qualifications to serve in the position to which you have been named.

My qualifications for the position of Director of Central Intelligence derive from my thirty years of government service as a naval officer. In that service I have been a frequent user of intelligence at successively higher levels of command. I have also been a manager of sizeable assets, ranging from individual ships to NATO's Southern Command with over 800,000 men from five nations. I believe that those experiences enable me to place national intelligence in proper perspective and to exercise the leadership and managerial skills to cope with a program of the magnitude of the DCI's.
